If you can remember the name, you should know that it is a neat and useful little shopping list manager which allows you to create a shopping list as you go about your normal everyday routine. All of the items in the shopping list can be written on a key of a notebook, a piece of paper, or in a wordprocessor document. The shopping list goes into a list (or a stack of names) and you can easily sort them out at any time. The system is easy to use because you only need to enter the name and the price of the item, you can add it to the list with the item. Most of the functionality is free but if you want to use more than 500 items, you need to pay for more options. You can make shopping lists with you and your family. With the application, teachers can plan and guide the work of students (by creating texts, tutorials, quizzes or any other learning material). AMATO consists of a central system to distribute the learning materials and tools and of a specific software for each student. In the course of using the application, each student has his own profile with personal data (school, student, personal), activities, learning materials and tools. After the graduation in the course, students, teachers and parents can take advantage of an extensive search for results and reference to access the remaining learning materials. The various technical functions may be accessed directly from a computer with a mouse and a keyboard. Aweber works perfectly with Microsoft Outlook and Google Calendar.
